

financial services

overview

The financial services industry is one of the most dynamic sectors in business today. It is highly competitive and fast-moving, just as players in the industry have become subject to increasingly complex regulatory requirements.

Financial institutions, financial service providers and their clients operating in this sophisticated market require legal counsel that can keep up with and anticipate change. They need counsel that can navigate legal regimes across Canada, and provide advice on regulatory matters and all types of financing transactions. They demand a legal advisor that can not only help identify and manage risks, but also facilitate transactions in an increasingly competitive and legally complex environment.

McMillan's Financial Services Group is recognized both nationally and internationally for its depth of expertise and responsiveness, with practitioners in all regions of Canada and strong cross-border transaction experience and capabilities. We act for domestic Canadian banks, major international financial institutions, government institutions, and corporate clients on significant, complex domestic and cross border financing and regulatory matters.

We also work in inter-disciplinary teams to deliver industry-specific expertise, assisting companies with financings related to areas such as mining, aircraft and aviation, energy, life sciences, pharmaceuticals and automotive. Our experience also includes advising on equipment leasing and financing, asset-based lending, and syndicated finance transactions.

Members of the Financial Services Group are highly regarded in international legal directories such as Chambers, Best Lawyers, Lexpert, the International Financial Law Review and Legal Who's Who.
