profile

Frédérique Gay is a paralegal in the Montreal Litigation Group. She assists lawyers in commercial litigation and class actions and her experience includes managing complex files and drafting proceedings and settlement agreements.

Frédérique also has significant experience in aviation law and for many years has assisted international organizations (including the International Air Transport Association) and international airlines in their business relationships with the Canadian regulatory authorities, mainly in respect of regulatory compliance and operational issues.

Frédérique graduated with a Master in Commercial and Transportation Law from the Université d'Aix-en-Provence, and has previously worked in law firms in France where she acquired experience in maritime and land transportation law, litigation, commercial law, and real estate law.
