profil

Jamieson's legal practice is focused on construction and real estate matters, product liability, competition law, class actions, insurance law, and commercial litigation. Jamieson is a lawyer with McMillan's Advocacy and Litigation Group.

In his construction and real estate practice Jamieson acts on all manner of construction disputes including claims for lien, holdback issues, delay claims, and negligence. Jamieson represents a range of clients on commercial real estate matters including developers, property owners, and commercial landlords and tenants. Jamieson is focused on providing upfront and in depth risk management advice.

Jamieson has assisted clients with a variety of competition law issues including matters involving the Competition Bureau. His class action practice is focused on two main areas: competition, and product liability. He works on a cross-Canada team of experienced counsel advising a range of international businesses including pharmaceutical companies, automotive manufacturers, and financial services companies.

Jamieson regularly assists large-scale manufacturers with crafting practical business-focused solutions to a host of product liability issues. He has a broad commercial litigation practice which includes experience with contract disputes, shareholder and partnership disputes, oppression claims, debt claims, allegations of fraud, and associated matters.

Jamieson has appeared at all levels of court in British Columbia, Alberta Provincial Court, before the Employment Standards
