In the 2024 edition of its Canada guide, Chambers & Partners recognizes Tim Murphy as an Eminent Practitioner in Projects: PPP & Infrastructure, Geza Banfai as a Senior Statesperson in Construction, and Max Mendelsohn as a Senior Statesperson in Restructuring & Insolvency. These three esteemed lawyers, in each of their respective fields, provide the senior-level capabilities and responsiveness that clients expect of a leading national business law firm.

Tim Murphy, Chief Executive Officer of McMillan, is a leading lawyer in public private partnerships and infrastructure with exceptional expertise in financial services, government and public policy, and Indigenous law. Advising national and international clients, he provides trusted counsel in project finance, construction law, infrastructure and renewable energy, government procurement and bid practices. Tim also brings unique insight into the workings of government through an extensive and distinguished background in the public sector.

Geza Banfai is widely respected by the legal community and across the construction and infrastructure sector. Geza represents stakeholders at every level of the construction pyramid, including lenders and owners (public and private), general contractors, subcontractors, material suppliers and workers. He also works with design, architectural and engineering professionals as well as testing consultants. Known for providing practical and sound business advice, Geza is sought out by a variety of clients on diverse projects.

Max Mendelsohn, a fellow and former director of the Insolvency Institute of Canada, has earned a reputation as a deal-maker. Working with clients in a range of industries including the retail, construction and manufacturing sectors, he provides advice and guidance to commercial enterprises, financial institutions and insolvency practitioners. Max is a frequent speaker and panel participant on bankruptcy and insolvency law reform, transborder insolvencies, and legislation relating to banking, insolvency and receivership.
