

DIVERSECITY FELLOW AMANDA KLEIN IN TORONTO STAR ARTICLE

Posted on January 20, 2011

Category: News

McMillan litigation associate, Amanda Klein, is mentioned in the Toronto Star article "Aspiring city-builders join DiverseCity program".

Amanda has been chosen as one of 25 DiverseCity Fellows. Chosen through a competitive process, the DiverseCity Fellows will "participate in a one-year program that aims to broaden their civic networks, deepen their awareness of issues facing the region and strengthen their capacity to lead change."

About DiverseCity Fellows:

Launched in January 2009, Fellows is part of DiverseCity: The Greater Toronto Leadership Project (DiverseCity) and is one of eight initiatives designed to diversify the Toronto region's leadership landscape. DiverseCity is a joint initiative of two organizations, the Greater Toronto CivicAction Alliance (formerly the Toronto City Summit Alliance) and Maytree. DiverseCity is funded in part by the Government of Ontario. To learn more, please visit <http://www.diversecitytoronto.ca/>.

To read "Aspiring city-builders join DiverseCity program" click here.