TORONTO, September 13, 2018 –McMillan LLP added two new lawyers as they continue to build out their Capital Markets Group in Calgary.

Cameron Schepp and Paul Barbeau, both hired as partners at McMillan LLP, were added to the corporate and securities team as part of McMillan's continued commitment to strengthen their capital markets presence in Alberta.

"We are very pleased that Cam and Paul have chosen to join our Calgary office, and we continue to pursue strategic growth in that office. Our work is not over, but we are pleased how the market has responded to our message about the many attributes of the McMillan platform, including the way our professionals collaborate with each other to solve client needs and to pursue new and emerging opportunities," says Stephen Wortley, Executive Partner.

Both lawyers are considered key building blocks in McMillan's strategic plan toward being a leading mid-market Capital Markets firm.

- Cameron Schepp regularly advises clients on both corporate and securities matters with a focus on corporate finance. Cam specializes in mid-market and emerging growth companies and has worked with many private and public oil and gas, oilfield service, construction, gaming and various technology companies. McMillan's Capital Markets Group is comprised of a diverse team of experts that play vital roles in helping our domestic and international clients navigate complex transactions.

"The addition of Cam and Paul add significant depth and breadth to the team and their experience in corporate finance and capital markets will strengthen the foundation we have built as a leading mid-market practice," says Adam Maerov, Office Management Partner, Calgary Office. "As the demand for our services in the oil and gas industry increases, the addition of Cam and Paul has positioned our practice well to serve the legal needs of our current and future clients."
