McMillan LLP is proud to be named among Canada's Top Employers for Young People for the fourth year running.

The Canada's Top Employers for Young People awards recognize employers offering the nation's best workplaces and programs for young people starting their careers. Winners are chosen on the quality of the programs and initiatives they offer to attract and retain younger workers.

"To receive this award four years in a row is very significant recognition," said Teresa Dufort, CEO and Managing Partner of McMillan. "We are committed to a healthy and supportive workplace that nurtures professional and personal growth, and we know that young professionals are the future of our firm. We are grateful that our efforts to help them succeed are validated."

Nisha Rider, McMillan's National Director of Human Resources said, "This award recognizes the value of the firm's career development, coaching and mentoring programs, and comprehensive wellness initiatives. We are honoured to be the recipient of this award and thrilled to be recognized for the investment we make in our young law and business professionals."

"Young professionals are tireless drivers of innovation and positive change," said Marlene Kane, National Director of Professional Development at McMillan. "Our investment in young talent positions the firm for continued success in meeting our clients' needs into the future."
